CHAMBER COMMERCE ENCOURAGES WATER SHIPPING

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED AT WED. MEETING

A commitee from the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce was appointed at a meeting of that organization Wednesday evening to encourage local merchants to make as much use of the water transportation facilities here as possible. Redwood City has an opportunity to develop an important shipping business on the bay, and this, the Chamber of Commerce feels, should be done. A committee consisting of Emmet Donnelly, T. H. Lohnes and E. B. Coman was appointed to place the matter before the local merchants and encourage shipping by water from and to this city.

At Wednesday's meeting Wilbur Selfridge was appointed vice-president and P. A. Ryan was elected treasurer of the organization. A resolution prepared by Mr. Cosgrave was passed by the chamber opposing amendment 15 now being considered by the legislature.

The local chamber of commerce has joined the San Mateo county chamber of commerce and the secretary, Mrs. Amy Holmes, will serve on the advisory board of that organization.

Local Bonds Cause Active Bidding

In the accompanying cartoon. Senor Whakeo and Senor Swateo are practicing up for the bull-fight that they think they have to stage tonight. The two characters are portrayed by George Gilcrest and Sam Enten, and are extremely well-fited for the parts, according to general opinion.

Swateo and Whakeo are two hoboes roaming in Spain. They come to the home of Senor Dictorio to beg for food and are taken for two famous bull-fighters who are to perform for Senor Dictorio. Many humorous circumstances arise but the pair manage to get through with their lives intact.

Tickets went on sale last Monday and have been going fast. They may be reserved at Ryan's Drug Store for fifty cents.

"The Toreadors" will commence at 8:15 sharp tonight at the Sequoia High School Auditorium.

GRACE D. COOPER ADDRESSES BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Mrs. Grace L. Cooper, the popular and efficient county treasurer, addressed the board of supervisors last Monday regarding the county funds. She said there were $1,400,000 in the treasury. The law required that this sum be distributed to the active and inactive funds. At the request of the board the sum of $800,000 was ordered to be placed in the inactive fund and tue balance of $600,000 in the active fund for current expense. Mrs. Cooper said that the former sum would be immediately parceled out to the various banks to bear interest. She has advertised for bids to secure the highest rate of interest on this amount. She usually secures a rate of three per cent from city banks, which bid higher than local banks, and two per cent by all peninsula institutions.

The entire amount of money received from all sources by the treasurer this fiscal year was $3,645.85. The sum secured from the various banks for interest for the fiscal year was $13,704.95. The institutions securing this money from the treasurer must advance securities valued at the amount of the loan plus ten per cent extra, so that the county is amply protected in every way.

COASTSIDE OIL SHOWS PROSPECTS OF BOOM

H. Griffith, editor of the Halfmoon Bay News, was here yesterday. He is a very optimistic about the oil prospects of his district. He predicts a big boom on the coast when the oil drillers begin to work after the inclement weather ceases. Shell Oil Company that is drilling on the Cowell ranch on the verge of the ocean beach has struck oil and is putting down a fifteen inch casing and is preparing to pump the oil from the well which is down 2000 feet. A big gusher is expected there. The Standard Oil Company is preparing to begin operations in the district. The Union Oil Company and fifteen other large concerns are buying land to start drilling when the weather clears. Halfmoon Bay, according to Mr. Griffith, will soon be in the grip of a big boom. Hundreds visit the oil fields daily and every house in town is rented. Should oil be struck in large quantities Halfmoon Bay will be one of the liveliest towns of the peninsula. Mr. Griffith is certain that gusher wells will be brought in very soon.

TWO LOCAL MOTORISTS IN NARROW ESCAPE

Crowded off road by a speeding automobile, J. L. Helm and Ed Beer of this city escaped what would have been a tragedy Sunday afternoon when they managed after a great effort to free themselves from their blazing automobile. The two men were driving south along the Bourn road in the Canada. They were forced off the road by a speeding car and crowded over the bank. The car careened, burst into flames, and crashed down the steep embankment, the two men still clinging to the flaming wreckage.

After the car had come to a stop after its mad career down the bank, the two men succeeded in extricating themselves from the flaming car. They were picked up by passing motorists and taken to the Mills Memorial hospital. Here it was found that they were suffering from severe cuts and bruises. They were otherwise uninjured.

W. R. BARTLEY IS ADMINISTRATOR FOR F. K. TOWNE ESTATE

Yesterday Judge Buck appointed W. R. Bartley, the widely-known real estate operator of Mayfield and La Honda, administrator of the estate of the late Frank K. Towne, who was his brother-in-law. The court fixed the bond of the administrator at $25,000.

W. R. Bartley told the court that the estate was valued at $108,550. It consists of real estate worth, approximately, $41,000 and personal property consisting of cash, bonds, stocks and life insurance appraised approximately at $67,350. The cash only amounted to $850.

It is believed that the property is heavily encumbered, although no reference to this was made in court.

An attorney from the law offices of Louis Oneal of San Jose appeared in court for the administrator.

Mr. Bartley in conversation with a Times-Gazete reporter yesterday stated that if the estate is properly conserved there will be enough money to pay any and all shortages left by the deceased. He estimates that $80,000 will be available to make the payments.

No report had been received up to last evening from the auditing firm which is working on the books of the late Frank K. Towne, treasurer of Redwood City. The report is being awaited with interest by all taxpayers of this city and a large number attended a meeting of the board on Monday evening, expecting that the auditors would have a report ready by that time. The citizens went away disappointed, however, as no statement was made in regard to the shortage which is known to exist in the treasurer's accounts.

In regard to this matter Mayor Henry Beeger stated that the auditors would give no statement until the audit had been completed and a written statement filed. The board was as anxious for a report as the citizens, Beeger stated, but were not able to give out any information. The board could not even learn how much longer will be required for the check up of the accounts. When the certified report is completed by the auditors it will be made public, Beeger assured the citizens present.

A short meeting was held last evening by the board to settle several matters, which had to be laid over from the Monday evening because of the illness and absence of City Attorney Mansfield.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

An exploitation in new lines of agriculture has been tried at Perris this year with a fair measure of success. The Pennsylvania Macaroni company of Pittsburgh, a wholesale concern, this season leased the 200-acre ranch in Perris Valley known as the Mountain Valley Rancho upon which to raise lettuce. The land was planted and favorable weather conditions brought the lettuce to early maturity. About twelve cars of choice quality stuff were shipped to New York and other eastern markets where it brought a fancy price. Then Imperial Valley and other sections began pouring their lettuce on the market at a price that would not justify harvesting. The crop was held back for a better price that did not come.

The old frame building at Napa, in Main street, near Third, built nearly sixty years ago, and long a landmark in that part of the city, is being razed to make room for a new fire-proof store building, to be erected by the owner of the property. In its early years the old building housed a cannery and barber shop. The tearing down disclosed that the building was without studding, and that its roof was supported only by upright boards which formed the sides; a typical construction of pioneer days.

Californians will soon have an opportunity to see what the first state capitol building looked like. He maintains that the music makes the cows give their milk down freely and keeps his men in good humor.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Deserved Tribute Paid to Famous Race Horse

A tablet marking the grave of Goldsmith Maid, queen of American trotters, who set a record of 2:14 for the mile at Boston in 1874 and died in 1885, was unveiled at Trenton, N. J., in the presence of Gov. A. Harry Moore and a distinguished gathering of women and men prominent in sport and society. The famous trotter is buried on a farm adjoining the Trenton fair grounds.

"We are here today to pay tribute to the horse," said Governor Moore. "Just a horse, and yet it gave the best that was in it. And that is a lesson for all human beings."

The tablet was given by a Trenton sportsman. Goldsmith Maid was owned by Henry M. Smith, a banker, and earned $364,200 for him in a reign of seven years on the American tracks.

You believe that easily, which you hope for earnestly.—Terrence.

PRINTS OF MENLO MAN SHOWN AT STANFORD

A collection of modern photographic prints will be exhibited from March to 27 at Stanford Art Gallery. These prints are made by Albert Petersen, who has a studio in Menlo Park.

The collection is classed in three groups: portraits, landscapes, and studies of the human figure, forty pictures in all.

The portraits are strong in contrasts of light and shade and well balanced in composition. Beside portraying a picture of the sitter Mr. Peersen aims with evident success to portray the soul.

The landscapes are charming with a soft and atmospheric quality, some of which are: "Telegraph Hill," "Through the Mist," "The Oak," and "Old Homestead."

There ic a delightful picture of an old book shop shining forth its light out into the dark night. The light fairly pours from the window.

The studies of the human figure are unique and unusual. Arrangement of line and form made to obtain symmetry in the composition. This appears to be one of the principle qualities. Another quality of Mr. Petersen's figure studies is that of expression of the moods as suggested by the titles, "Spirit of the Nile," "Remorse;" other titles are, "Aphrodite," "Harmony" and "Genesis." The exhibition can be viewed by the public, free, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5 p. m.

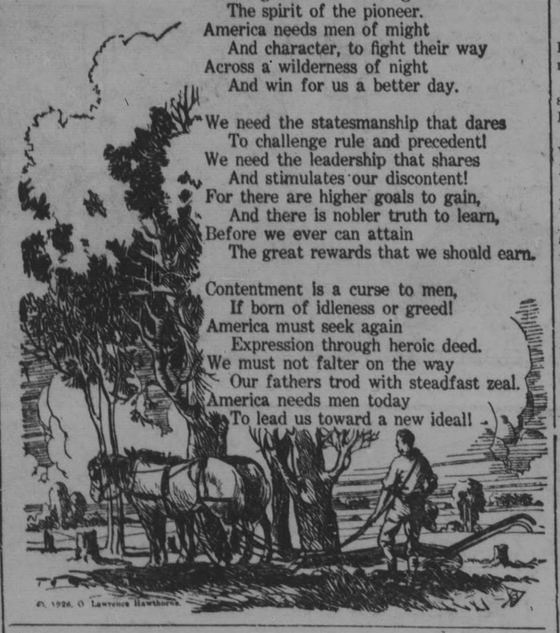
We Must Not Falter Now

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne



America today needs men
Of courage, and of vision clear.
To bring into our lives again
The spirit of the pioneer.
America needs men of might
And character, to fight their way
Across a wilderness of night
And win for us a better day.

We need the statesmanship that dares
To challenge rule and precedent!
We need the leadership that shares
And stimulates our discontent!
For there are higher goals to gain,
And there is nobler truth to learn,
Before we ever can attain
The great rewards that we should earn.

Contentment is a curse to men,
If born of idleness or greed!
America must seek again
Expression through heroic deed.
We must not falter on the way
Our fathers trod with steadfast zeal.
America needs men today
To lead us toward a new ideal!

TWO ARRESTED FOR SHOOTING GAME BIRDS

Ettore Dellamico and Joseph Dullucchi of Colma were arrested during the week for shooting non game birds, by Game Warden Burke. They appeared before Judge Griffin on Wednesday and each was sentenced to pay a fine of $10.

Louis Gori, also of Colma, was sentenced to pay a fine, by the judge, of $50, for trapping birds by the use of lime in a canyon near Colma. He was caught by Game Warden Burke in the act of picking the birds to be used in making "polinta," a dish of rare delicacy enjoyed by the Italian people. Mr. Burke, in addressing the court explained that such wholesale trapping of songsters would soon rob the county of its bird life and urged the court to impose the extreme penalty on the prisoner at bar. The prisoner being a farm laborer the court thought that the fine of $50 would subserve the ends of justice. Gori paid the money and departed for the land of cabbages and artichokes and hog ranches and blind pigs.

DIRECT AND INDIRECT TAXES

Lloyd C. Griscom, publisher of the New Era, ynbrook, New York, in the following eritorial on irect and indirect taxes, states fundamental uths on taxation. His article is timely for any ate, and especially in states which are considerg a state income tax.

"For the fiscal year of 1925, the entire revenue the state of New York was $160,000,000, and the come tax brought in only $10,500,000 of this mount. On the other hand the corporation tax, n indirect tax, contributed $48,510,000, or nearly one-third of the entire revenues. Because it was indirec tax the public paid no attention to it, but oked anxiously forward to a reduction in the dit income tax. The corporation tax is a percente levied on corporations for the privilege of doing siness in New York State. But the corporations not suffer because of this tax; they simply add a le more to their prices, and the public pays this take care of the higher taxes. The public thinks the time the corporations are carrying the exses of the government, whereas the consumers each contributing their little part in increased es instead of an extra dollar or two in direct me taxes.

The direct taxes of the state are but two kinds, estate and income tax, and these aggregate than one-fourth of the amount necessary to the state.

The honest tax is the direct tax, and it would etter if more of the indirect taxes could be ped out and the people pay out of their personal kets the cost of government. When a tax s due and the taxpayers must dig down perly for the money, they are not going to be ss about what the money is spent for. When rden becomes too heavy they have their own ly by refusing to sanction expensive governeither by voting against specific budgets or g to office men pledged to economy.

he important things are the expenditures. ublic will pay, either directly or indirectly. her the pill is sugar-coated or raw, the dose e taken, and if the legislators want to make for the people—as they profess—they will at the dose is as small as possible."

MONEY AND NAMES

ndon dispatches thrill with a proposed invesn of the possession of certain titles of nobilich Labour leaders claim have been purfor cash at so much a title. According to , such an investigation might endanger of the peerages of the empire as well as a r of large private incomes. Money, it would occupies as important a place in the economy British cousins as among ourselves. "Give gold," said King Cyrus of Persia, "and I will though a babbling fool withall." So today ld one may become "a knight, a squire or the manor."

we in America cannot in fairness smile at tisher who pays pounds sterling for a title few hundred years ago he could have won prowess on the field of battle. Here we all titles and reverence the money direct. small men are elevated to big places; bad set up to direct the morals of good men; mediocre intelligence are placed in posicommand, and charlatans demand and ree respect of the populace. And American too, often have served for the purchase of ith a nonenity thrown in for good measure. we in America with all our boasted scorn adent nobility" have yet to learn that "The but the penny stamp; the man's the gold at."

a contrast between these ancient methonstruction and the power era which Our enjoys today.

merican workman with his power equipdo more work in a day than a hundred, y cases a thousand, Roman slaves could same time.

example, take the modern tractor in road ion, logging and farming. With one man, more work in a day than scores of helpgs. And so with the electric motor. Such al power has changed the position of from mere laborers into efficient producorresponding advance in wages and livards. What a contrast to the ancient g methods of production.

MISS DAVIS HAD TO SKATE ON ICE IN WOODEN SHOES

Accomplished This Difficult Task in Picturizing "The Red Mill."

MANY EXTRAS IN THE FILM

Several Hundred Appear in Ice Skating Scene Representing Dutch Winter Carnival.

First—wooden shoes!

Then—ice skates—and on the same wooden shoes

These are the extremities of pedal difficulty and ambulistic tribulations encountered by Marion Davies, famous Cosmopoiltan star, in playing her latest role, the captivating Dutch heroine in "The Red Mill," which comse Monday and Tuesday, March 14 and 15, to Sequoia Theatre.

As a little Dutch girl, Miss Davies appears in the petticoats, pigtails and wooden shoes of the Netherlands. It took several weeks of practice to learn to walk in them—just as it took diligent practice for her to learn to walk like a boy in "Beverly of Graustark" fastened to them and skate skates fastened to thm, and skate in the frozen canal in the winter scenes in the new spectacle, in which she and several hundred gaily-attired Hollanders appear in a winter festival.

The new story, staged on a spectacular scene at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, is an adaptation of the famous Victor Herbert stage hit of the same name. Owen Moore plays the leading male role.

BIDS TO CUT HIS LOCKS WERE MANY

Three Thousands Barbers Wanted to Cut Jackie Coogan's Famous Locks.

Barbers—three thousand of 'em with the efficient aid of Uncle Sam's postoffice department, put in their earnest requests to yield the shears on the Dutch bob of Jackie Coogan when it was first announced that the little star of the movies would have his hair shorn for his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut," coming to the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, March 16 and 17. Special matinee Thursday 3:15 p. m.

Jackie's secretary was kept busy for days reading the urgent requests and pleadings from tonsorial experts from every nook and corner of America. That the news of this important event was broadcast to foreign shores was evidenced in the cables and leters from barbers in Europe, each of whom declared that he was the best barber in the world, and that so famous a boy as Jackie must have him to cut his hair.

In Hollywood and Los Angeles the knights of the steaming towel resorted to telephoning the Coogan offices and called in person on the young star. The lucky barber was John McDevitt of San Francisco. John claims the distinction of official barber to the Coogans. His trusty shears have bobbed the hair of Jackie's mother and his grandmother, to say nothing of Robert Anthony, new scion of the family. The big scenes for "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut" were all filmed in and near San Francisco and the hair-cutting episode was photographed at the Graf Brothers Studio in San Mateo, California, which was one reason why a San Francisco barber was elected to perform the famous operation.

Eight cameras, not counting the news photographers' machines, were focused on Jackie's head when the golden-bobbed locks began to fall under the barber's shears because it was one scene that could not be retaken. Jackie was jubilant as his ears began to peek out into the cold world. In any event Mother Coogan still has a baby in her home, and in addition a juvenile actor whose star shines brighter than ever now that he has emerged from babyhood to boyhood.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

OVER TWO MILLION PEOPLE HAVE DIABETES—UNITED STATES SURVEY REVEALS

By E. Rodney Fiske, M. D.
New York City.
Member of Gorgas Memorial Institute.

Except for diseases of the arteries, diabetes has increased more rapidly as a cause of death than cancer, apoplexy, organic diseases of the heart, cirrhosis of the liver, or Bright's disease. Diabetic mortality about doubled in the decade ending 1920 as compared with that of 1890.

There are no accurate data for the total number of diabetics in the United States, but a rough estimate based on mortality records would lead us to believe that 2% of the population has diabetes, or that in this country more than 2,000,000 diabetics exist.

The increase in the number of cases discovered is probably due to several causes, such as greater accuracy of vital statistics, more frequent urinary examinations, a general increase in the duration of life, and the increasing number of physical examinations by family physicians.

In New ork City, the total mortality per thousand population has been halved in the last forty years, but the diabetic death rate has increased six fold.

The registrar's office in Boston shows that between 1895 and 1913 the average duration of life in the fatal cases of diabetes amounted to 2 3-10 years. In 1915 it was 4 3-10 years, and in 1920 it was 5 3-10 years. This shows an increase of about three years in the life expectancy of the diabetic, and the 2,000,000 cases in this country get an additional 6,000,000 years of life.

It is found that more men than women are treated for diabetes with a greater mortality among the women. This is due probably to the discovery of a greater number of cases in men who take life insurance examinations, and the diffidence of women for physical examinations.

Heredity plays an important part and should be given serious attention by all families where diabetes is known to exist. The Jewish race, with a special tendency to obesity, is prone to the disease.

The physical causes of diabetes are unknown. ossibly infections focalized in some spot such as the teeth, tonsils, and sinuses, and gastric ulcer, gall-bladder disease, acute appendicitis, and chronic diseases of the colon may be causal.

Obesity and diabetes have long been associated. Over 40 per cent of the cases show a market obesity before the outbreak of the disease. Perhaps a more careful history will show a greater percentage.

Careful statistics of life insurance companies show that the most favorable weight for longevity in middle life is 10 to 20 pounds below the normal weight. The penalty, therefore, of overweight is increasing mortality and diabetes is the most potent factor. The greater the obesity, the more likely the penalty. hile it happens, it is quite rare for diabetes to dvelop in a person habitually underweight.

The answer to these statements, from the standpoint of prevention, is to avoid excessive eating, to limit the intake of food to body needs rather than to caprices of the appetite. The more the indulgence in rich and sweet foods, the more the prevalence of overweight and diabetes.

The amount of sugar consumed per capita in the United States is very great and it is in increasing ratio, as is the progress of diabetes. In countries like Japan, where this is not the case, the prevalence of diabetes is much less.

STANDPOINT OF PREVENTION

By L. E. Hetrick, M. D., N. Y. City
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute.

Deafness from the standpoint of prevention! That certainly is a fitting subject to be discussed, because a great deal can be done towards preventing this malady, and because deafness has such an important bearing upon the earning capacity of the individul.

Of the five special senses, sight and hearing are the most indispensable. The impairment or loss of either is a great affliction, cutting the unfortunate off from full contact with his fellow men. Much can be done to prevent such a tragedy by understanding ujst a little about its cause.

There are two general types of deafness: catarrhal deafness and nerve deafness. There is a third type of deafness which fortunately is rare. It is known as otosclerosis, and is commonly referred to as "hardening of the ear."

In catarrhal deafness that part of the ear is involved which collects and conducts sound waves to the inner ear. In nerve deafness the organ of hearing in the inner ear, or the nerve itself, is involved.

Catarrhal deafness originates most commonly in the nose and nasopharynx, hence the preventive treatment for this disease should begin early in life with earnest and strenuous ecorts to correct all nasal and nasopharyngeal catarrhs. The early removal of adenoids and diseaseu tonsils, the early correction of nasal deformities, etc., are absolutely imperative.

Nerve reafness may result from numerous causes, but most commonly from syphilis. Many occupational and constitutional diseases, such as typhoid, scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, anemia and Bright's disease may affect the nerve of hearing. Many drugs likewise affect the nerve of hearing, as, for example, quinine, the salicylates, mercury, lead, arsenic, tobacco, alcohol, any many others.

In order that scientific treatment may be instituted in the care of any deaf person, an absolutely accurate diagnosis of the type of deafness must be made. Treatment directed to an ecect, without taking notice of the causative factors and their removal is ridiculous. Numerous cases could be cited in which, by careful history taking and differential diagnosis, patients have been relieved of their trouble by no more complicated treatment than the discontinuance of the use of tobacco.

It is quite obvious from these few remarks that, before any treatment begins, the cause of the particular patient's deafness be determined. It follows, therefore, that any nostrum or mechanical contrivance, advertised as a cure-all, should be looked upon with suspicion, to say the least.

Mechanical treatment, as frequently used in the case of catarrhal deafness, is often harmful in the case of nerve deafness.

As a final word, it is urged that you select for treatment of your deafness a physician of repute who is conscientious, who is a careful diagnostician, and who has no cure-all.

Examinations For Operators Licenses to Improve Driving

Extension of the provisions of the law covering examination of applicants for operators' licenses is provided in two amendments under consideration by the State Legislature, according to the Legislative Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. Improvement of the stadard of motor vehicle operation in California, the association pointed out in a statement today, is the purpose of these measures.

Compulsory examination of all new applicants to drive a motor vehicle i this state is provided in one amendment and a provision in the other gives the State Motor Vehicle Division the discretionary authority to determine the fitness of present holders of operators' cards under certain conditions.

As the law now stands the examination of new applicants for operators' or chauceurs' licenses is optional with the Motor Vehicle Division. Under the proposed amendment it would be mandatory on the division to examine as to fitness every person first applying for the legal right to drive a car over California highways and city streets.

The provision that would allow the State to determine the fitness to drive of those now holding operators' cards, the Automobile Association points out, is contained in an amendment changing the system of card issuance. The Motor Vehicle Division would be authorized by this amendment to cancel, at any time, all operators' license cards which have been outstanding three years or more thereby making it necessary for motorists whose cards were thus cancelled to file application for renewal. When thus applying they yould be subject to examination within the discretion of the department.

"Under the present law, an operators' license is valid until suspended or revoked," says the Automobile Association statement. "Thus thousands of cards, carried for long periods, have become so soiled, torn or otherwise mutilated as to be unreadable. Since their main purpose is identification, it is proposed to remedy this situation."

The amendment will also make it possible for the Motor Vehicle Division to clear its records of cards of motorists who have moved from the state or have died. It will also give a closer check on changes of address of holders of operators' licenses.

HONING OF NASH 7-BEARING CRANKSHAFT CONTRIBUTES TO LONG LIFE OF NASH MOTOr

How inventive genius keeps pace with the ever-rising necessities of modern industry is reflected in much of the machinery with which the Nash Motors plants are equipped. Probably no other industry has seen greater advancement in the design of automatic machinery to meet the requirements of volume products than has been witnessed in the motor car ndustry in the past ten years. Scores of human-like machines, totally unknown a few years ago are today performing various operations in different departments of the Nash plants they are performing these operations quicker and with a degree of consistent accuracy unattainable by hand.

One of he newest and most interesting automatic machines known to the industry is that in use at the Nash factory. It is an automatic honing machine which accomplishes at one time the final mirror-like finish on all seven main bearings and six connecting rod bearings. Formerly it was necessary to polish individually each of these thirteen bearings. But now the honing operation is performed on every bearing simultaneously and with scientific accuracy within a fractional part of a thousandth of an inch.

The automatic honing machine, equipped with a number of long "arms" to receive the crankshaft, has all the appearance of a living octopus. The machine revolves about the seven main bearings and six connecting rod bearings and has a rotary and reciprocating motion. The operator, who may attend a number of these machines at the same time, merely places the crankshaft in position and pulls the starting lever. When the operation is completed the machine automatically stops. Honing of the crankshaft, a practice until recently unknown to the automobile industry, gives each bearing on the Nash shaft a mirror-like finish and assures longer life to hte 7-bearing motor which each Nash model is equipped.

Automobile Income Tax Answered

Puzzling questions confronting thousands of motorists in connection with automobile expense and allowable deductions on income tax returns which must be filed March 15 are answered in a statement issued recently by the California State Automobile Association. To clear up some of the common questions faced by theindividual automobile owner, the Automobile Association submited a list of written queries o John B. McLaughlin, collector of internal revenue for this district. The questions and his answers follow:

Question—Can the Federal excise tax paid by the manufacturer on cars produced and sold during the past year be deducted from income by an individual taxpayer who has purchased a new automobile during the past year?

Answer—The war tax on automobiles sold by the manufacturers is a tax imposed upon sales by the manufacturer and is not an allowable deduction in computing net income of a purchaser, even though such taxes are billed to the purchaser as separate items.

Question — Are motor vehicle registration fees and weight taxes paid the State of California deductible from income?

Answer—Yes, they are deductible. State and local taxes (except taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed) are deductible from gross income.

Question—Can gasoline taxes pain on gasoline used to operate the taxpayers' motor vehicle be deducted from income?

Answer—The gasoline tax is imposed on the distributor and is deductible by the distributor and is not deductible by the consumer. If it is used by the consumer for business purposes the full cost of gasoline and the tax i sa business expense and deductible a uch.

Question—Can county personal property taxes paid on a motor vehicle be deducted from income?

Answer — Personal property taxes are levied by the county and as such are deductible. This applies to personal property taxes on automobiles.

Question—From the standpoint of the business or professional man who uses his automobile either wholly or partially for business purposes, what deductions can be made for expense of operation and maintenance, for depreciation, for insurance, etc.? What kind of a showing is necessary when such deductions are claimed by the taxpayer?

Answer—Accounts should be kept and submitted showing expense of operation, maintenance, insurance, etc. Where the automobile is used partially in business and partially for personal use, the proportionate part that the machine is used for business should be substantiated. The business portion is then deductible as an expense. Depreciation can be taken as in Schedule F, Form 1040.

SPRINGTIME LURE DRAWS MOTORISTS TO TRECK OVER CALIFORNIA ROADS

Signs of Spring are becoming increasingly evident along California's scenic highways and already motorists are extending the range of their week-end jaunts into the hills and valleys. The Touring Bureau of the California State Automobile Assiciation reports Automobile Association report of motorists in localities where Springtime's beautiful blooms prevail.

Wild-flowers are beginning to paint the hillsides in varied hues. The first blossoms have burst forth in fruitful valleys. Mountain streams are running full and Spring weather is in the air. Motor travel is showing the seasonal increase much earlier, the Association reports.

In certain sections of the Santa Clara Valley almond and apricot trees are blossoming but it will be a week or so before the gorgeous profusion of blossoms spreads over the valley, the association's San Jose office reports. Other sections report almond blossoms as Spring's harbinger. The Oakdale district, where the annual blossom festival has already been held, is a riot of fragrance and color. In Contra Costa, Alameda and Napa counties, motorists will find these typical of California Springtime.

The San Rafael office reports wild flowers in variety in the March sun including wild pansies, Indian pain-brushes, poppies and Johnny-jump-

FACTORY MAKES BIG SHIPMENT

FOUR SOLID TRAINLOADS OF NASH CARS ARE SHIPPED FROM NASH FACTODIES TO SAN FRANCISCO AND LOS ANGELES.

KENOSHA, Wis., March 1.—Four hundred and ninety-three automobiles—four solid trainloads—were shipped today from the company's three factories at Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars were about equally divided between Advanced Six Special and Light Six models. The shipments left the Kenosha and Milwaukee plants over the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad and left the Racine plant over the Chicago, Milmaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

The cars will arrive on the Pacific coast in about ten days. As the long trains laden with approximately three quarters of a million dollars worth of automobiles, steamed out of the yards at the various Nash factories for their long trip to California, they represented a graphic picture of industrial activity.

Included in the large shipment were many of the new enclosed models, introduced to the public during the automobile show period in New ork and Chicago. These models have forward-sweeping French type backs and French type roofs and, like all cars in the Nash line, are equipped with 7-bearing crankshaft motors.

Coincident with the heavy coast shipment, it is announced by the company that the "high ten" among all Nash distributors sold 100 more cars at retail during the week ending February 19 than were sold in the same period by the ten leading distributors a year ago and 276 more cars than were sold by the "high ten" among all Nash distributors the same week, two years ago.

15,000 Dealers and Salesmen To Attend Twenty-one Meetings

DETROIT, Mich.—One of the most significant events in the automotive industry today is the series of nationwide sales meetings of the Chevrolet Motor Company now in progress. They are destined to reach 15,000 dealers, associate dealers and bankers in 21 of the largest cities before the last meeting is held in April.

Sales plans of the company for what is expected to be the greatest year in its history are outlined at these meetings by officials of the sales, advertising and service divisions. As the world's largest makers of three-speed transmission cars the company is looking forward to 1927 for a measurable increase over 1926, when production records for the previous year were exceeded by more than 40 per cent. Recently announcement was made that the company's facilities had been expanded to make possible production of 1,000,000 units yearly.

R. H. Grant, vice-president and general sales manager, will direct the meetings and outline the most comprehensive sales campaign ever attempted by a manufacturer of automobiles.

The meetings will be held from coast to coast and will place the entire dealer organization in personal touch with company officials and will give first-hand information on the workings of the sales plans. A graphic presentation of these plans will feature the afternoon sessions at the meetings. Playlets and displays will be used to demonstrate new policies of sales, advetrising, service and used car merchandising, under the 1927 program. Dealers will be guests of the company at banquets following the meetings.

CIVIC ACTION IS URGED TO CURB ACCIDENTS

SAN FRANCISCO ENFORCEMENT MOVEMENT ANSWER TO TRAFFIC SAFETY PROBLEM

Urging concerted civic action to curb the traffic accident death toll in a manner similar to the permanent movement launched in San Francisco by the California State Automobile Associatio, the National Safety Council in a recent bulletin calls for complete cooperation of all agencies, official, commercial and civic, to arouse the public consciene throughout the nation. The plan advaned by the Council, according to Percy E. Towne, chairman of the Public Safety Committee of the Automobile Association, indicates that San Francisco officials and citizens in their recent organization of a Traffic Law Enforcement Board at the instigation of the Association have set an example that may be followed by cities generally.

The Safety Council estimates that 23,000 persons were killed in automobile accidents in the United States during 1926, an increase of 4.5 per cent over 1925. The Safety Council says: "Public officials, educators, civic leaders and others who find themselves facing the accident problem have come to realize that in it lies one of their chief responsibilities to the public which they serve. Thousands of these individuals and these groups want to do something but don't know exactly what or how. In this general desire, ready to crystallize into determination and concrete activity, lies the hope for public safety."

Towne, chairman of the permanent Traffic Law Enforcement Board, pointed out that San Francisco has found the answer to the question raised by the Safety Council. The new Board is engaged in a sustained movement to curb the traffic fatality list, which reached record figures last year.

STATE REGULATION OF AUTOMOBILE CAMPS PROPOSED IN BILL

State regulation and licensing of automobile camps in California is proposed in a bill introduced before the Legislature by Senator J. C. Inman, according to the Legislative Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. The measure defines an automobile camp and provides for regulation of the sanitation and maintenance of camps. They are to b licensed by the State Board of Health at $25 per year and to be inspected and supervised by health inspectors. The bill makes it a misdeameanor to conduct a camp without securing a license. Supporters of the measure point out that its purpose is to maintain a high standard of automobile camps in California.

Skyline Boulevard to be Oiled by Commission

Many miles of rock surfaced State highways will be oiled during the Spring months to lower maintenance costs and to eliminate dust, it is announced by State Highway Engineer R. M. Morton. This type of treatment of unpaved highways was first tried on an extensive scale last year and the improved riding qualities obtained has resulted in a demand for more work of a like nature this year.

lans are now being made following a careful survey of last Summer's work to do the oiling with less inconvenience to the traveling public than was possible, when the work was in its experimental stages.

Except in instances where only a light application of oil simply as a dust palliative will be made, placing of crushed rock surfacing will proceed application of fuel oil which acts as a binder for the rock.

The highway commission at its last meeting authorized expenditures from the maintenance funds in anticipation of the summer's oiling program, which will be under way as soon as the weather permits.

Among the oiling projects authorized is one for the Skyline Boulevard in this county for $23,250.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Shanghai Crisis Is Near—Britain Sending Warship to Nicaragua.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

MATTERS in China moved rapidly toward a crisis last week. Following his crushing defeat at Hangchow by the Nationalists, Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, hitherto ruler of Kiangsu province, gave up Hangchow, Kashing and Ningpo, second largest port in Chekiang province, and retired on Shanghai. At the same time the Nationalists in Shanghai started a general strike which, though nominally directed against Sun, was actually an anti-foreign demonstration and pretty effectually tied up business and traffic in the city. The Chinese officials tried to curb it by the summary execution of scores of leaders and student agitators whose heads were sliced off and stuck on poles in the streets. In the midst of the ruction Sun decided he was beaten and practically surrendered leadership of the anti-Canton forces there to Gen. Chang Chung-chang, boss of Fengtien, who entered the lower Yangtse valley with a large army. Crews of two of Sun's gunboats anchored in the Whangpoo river rebelled and began firing three-inch shells in the direction of the Shanghai arsenal. Owing to poor marksmanship nearly all the shells fell in the French concession, where several residences were struck. French gunboats speedily put an end to this performance. On Thursday the Nationalists called off the strike, partly because they were running out of funds and partly because of the terrorism of the executions. The beheadings ceased and most of the workers returned to their jobs.

Twelve hundred American marines arrived from San Diego on the transport Chaumont but did not disembark. That made the total of American armed forces there about 2,300. Five American warships were at anchor in the Whangpoo and four more destroyers were on the way there. The British forces were constantly being strengthened, and the French were reinforced. All these may be needed when the expected struggle for possession of Shanghai starts between the Cantonese and the armies of Marshal Chang Tso-lin which are moving from the north.

BY A vote of 208 to 172 the house accepted the senate amendment to the navy appropriation bill providing money for beginning the three light cruisers whose construction the President has insisted should be delayed. The house reduced the amount from $1,200,000 to $450,000, and it was understood the senate would acquiesce in this change.

IN ORDER to provide a place of refuge for British subjects imperiled by the civil warfare in Nicaragua, the British government decided to send a cruiser to the Central American republic. This plan was adopted after the British charge d'affaires at Managua had notified the government that President Diaz and the American minister, Mr. Eberhardt, had stated they could not guarantee to protect British lives and property in case of renewed street fighting. It was stated in London that the sending of the warship does not indicate a change in the British policy in Latin America nor a change in attitude toward the Monroe doctrine. Secretary of State Kellogg in a formal statement said that "Admiral Latimer has been instructed from the beginning to protect foreign as well as American lives and property and is doing everything he can to do so."

State department officials declined to discuss the British move further, but the announcement drew sarcastic comment from Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee, who is opposed to the administration's Nicaraguan policy and whose committee gave further consideration to his resolution proposing that its members visit Mexico and Nicaragua during the congressional recess to obtain first-hand information as to conditions.

Seemingly determined to put an end to the Sacasa rebellion, the American government sent more marines to Nicaragua and Admiral Latimer created new neutral zones for the purpose of keeping the railway in operation and of protecting the cities. Dispatches from Managua said President Diaz was about to submit to the Nicaraguan congress a proposal for a 100 year alliance with the United States which would mean practically the creation of a protectorate.

ITALY'S formal reply to President Coolidge's naval disarmament proposal was transmitted to Washington. It was a politely worded but flat rejection, and was drafted by Premier Mussolini himself. Before being a military or even political problem, naval defense is for Italy one of existence, the note says. Geography establishes characteristics which cannot be disregarded. Italy's position in Europe is determined entirely by the fact that her territorial limits are within one body of water, outlets of which are entirely controlled by other nations.

The note declares that so far as the European continent is concerned, there is an inalienable interdependence of all categories of armaments of every single power and that it is impossible to adopt the measure for only the five great naval powers. Finally, Italy must take into account those other nations who exist on or can enter the Mediterranean, particularly favored by their geographical position along lines of communication, and who have under construction many units of various types or who are preparing naval programs of great importance. Because of these motives, the Italian government is confident that the United States will take account of the reasons for which Italy cannot accede to the proposal contained in the memorandum of February 10.

Japan, on the other hand, has accepted the Coolidge proposal and says its delegates at Geneva will have full power to negotiate an agreement extending the limitation to all classes of fighting ships. But the Japanese reply makes it plain that the government is unwilling to extend the 5-5-3 ratio to cruisers, destroyers and submarines. For these vessels it wants a ratio nearer a parity with America and Great Britain.

SOVIET Russia has been twisting the British lion's tail too persistently, and last week it received from the British government a blunt warning that all relations between the two nations would be broken off unless it mended its ways at once. In the note, called one of the most outspoken ever formulated by the British foreign office, Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, says that the relations between the British government and the union of soviet socialist republics "continue notoriously of an unsatisfactory nature." He declares that "there are limits beyond which it is dangerous to drive public opinion in Great Britain" and that a continuance of the breeches of the agreement sooner or later will cause a break between the two countries.

All Russia celebrated the ninth anniversary of the establishment of the Red army, and the press carried articles by leading soviet authorities asserting that the army was prepared to meet all eventualities.

WITH only a few days remaining before the end of the session, congressmen made an effort to rush through a lot of legislation. In the senate this was hampered by the filibuster carried on for the purpose of defeating the bill to dam the Colorado river in Boulder canyon. Ashurst of Arizona led this filibuster and frustrated all efforts of Johnson of California, author of the bill, to bring it to a vote. As the house steering committee had decided the measure should not be taken up in the house unless acted on by the senate, it was considered practically dead so far as this congress was concerned.

In its intervals of real work the senate passed the house bill authorizing the veterans' bureau to make loans to veterans on their adjusted service certificates. The house passed the James bill authorizing an appropriation of $8,491,000 for new barracks at various army posts. President Coolidge signed the radio act and the army appropriation bill.

WHEN Samuel Insull of Chicago appeared before the Reed committee in Washington he answered most of the questions concerning his contributions to the Illinois primary campaign funds, but flatly refused to tell to whom he gave $40,000 for local political campaigns. Nor would he permit his attorney to reveal this. The public utilities magnate was instructed to return to the committee room at the end of the week, and it was expected that he would persist in his refusal to reply to the question. Then, probably he will be cited for contempt, as will be Thomas W. Cunningham of Philadelphia, who would not reveal the source of $50,000 he contributed to the Vare-Beidleman fund. State's Attorney Crowe of Chicago avoided citation by answering all questions.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE of Wisconsin took the occasion of Washington's birthday to introduce in the senate this resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from Presidential office after their second term, has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

In the house Representative Fairchild of New York introduced a resolution for amending the federal Constitution so that "no person shall be eligible to the office of President who has previously served two terms, whether by election or by succession due to the removal, death, resignation or inability of the President where the term of succession shall have continued for a period of two years or more."

Under the terms of the La Follette resolution, Mr. Coolidge would be ineligible for re-election next year. Under the Fairchild plan, he would be eligible.

COMMANDER FRANCESCO DI PINEDO of Italy, for the glory of Fascism, flew across the Atlantic ocean last week. He started from the Cape Verde islands, off the coast of Africa, and flew direct to Fernando Noronha island, Brazil. He passed on with the intention of making the mainland but encountered heavy seas off the coast and was forced to return to the island. After his plane is repaired Di Pinedo plans to fly to Jamaica, Cuba, New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago and New York.

FOR two days and nights the North Atlantic seaboard was swept by furious winds and tremendous seas, and before the storm subsided it had taken nearly two score lives. Boats were wrecked, beach structures razed and sea walls smashed. Far out at sea the transatlantic shipping was crippled and the great liners were all many hours late.

COAL operators and miners in conference at Miami failed to agree on a wage scale for the bituminous field. The workers consistently refused to consider a reduction of wages. It is supposed generally that this means a strike on April 1, but authorities assert there will not be a complete cessation of production in the field.

PREMIER IBANEZ, declaring war to a finish on communism in Chile, has issued a statement to the press saying: "Those who have had the audacity to replace our flag by the red rag of bolshevism cannot be permitted to control the government." He emphasizes that the government will spare no efforts in dealing with such persons. This is borne out by the arrest of more than 100 alleged agitators, among them a number of Communist deputies.

OHIO lost one of her most distinguished sons in the death of Judson Harmon, who passed away unexpectedly in Cincinnati at the age of eighty-one years. Mr. Harmon was twice governor of Ohio, once attorney general of the United States, and several times a prominent possibility for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

England Has Filed Davis Cup Challenge Once More

Great Britain, the only nation which has competed in every tournament for the Davis cup since it was put into competition in 1900, has filed her twenty-second challenge, the United States Lawn Tennis association announced.

America dropped out of one tournament, that of 1919, because of post-war conditions in other countries, but the British resumed where they left off at the beginning of the World war and reached the challenge round against Australia.

In the 21 competitions for the international tennis trophy, the British have been five times triumphant as compared with six victories for Australia and ten for the United States.

A challenge from Cuba, the first in the American zone, was received by the U. S. L. T. A. simultaneously with the one from England.

Coming Hurling Star

Guy Bush of the Chicago Cubs is a stripling from Mississippi with a shock of black hair, a wiry face, a world of unction and a passion for baseball. Manager McCarthy predicts he will be his star pitcher this year.

Red Sox Training

One workout a day will be enough for the Red Sox when they go into spring training at New Orleans, Bill Carrigan, their new manager, believes. Carrigan thinks that two sessions are apt to leave the players "burned out" as the home stretch of the pennant race nears. When Carrigan piloted the Sox to two league victories the boys did their spring stuff at Hot Springs, Ark., from 10:30 in the morning until 1 in the afternoon. Other managers do not agree with Carrigan.

MANNERS NEEDED TO SAVE HUNTING

English Far Ahead of Us in Preservation of Game.

The English are far ahead of us both in the niceties of hunting and in the preservation of game, and we might do well to follow in their tracks, Nash Buckingham intimates in an article on the hunting situation in America in the the Sportsman.

"The English have the surety of shooting down to such a point of productiveness," writes Mr. Buckingham, "that they actually have time to discuss the table manners of what one might term a 'well-manicured sportsmanship.' Most of the 'Don'ts' we see in our conversational pleadings consist of warnings against shooting the farmer's cattle or ox or anything that is his, burning his barns, cutting wires, and other sportively alluring acts falling just short of murder and mayhem."

Turning to the game depletion in this country the article says, "The buffalo, the antelope, the wild pigeon are gone. We have rough-and-tumbled the game, bringing it to sad estate by market hunting, and then, as its scarcity has become apparent, turning to laws to fend off the surge of civilization.

"However, there must be more light before more laws. There must be reclamation before reformation, and reformation before restoration. Game restoration, if not the greatest, is one of the greatest of reclamation projects in this country today, morally, physically, spiritually, and commercially." Without it all wild game in this country will be in the sad plight of the dodo.

The game refuge bill sponsored by five of the country's greatest national protective organizations will soon be up before congress. "There are 79 protective state associations listed in our national directory. There are 53 state and territorial game and fish departments. There are 17 national protective organizations. There is now the Sporting Arms and Manufacturers' Institute, comprising as members some twenty-odd manufacturers of weapons, tackle, and general hunting equipment. There is one government protective agency and there is the migratory bird law."

But according to Mr. Buckingham, the only way to save our game is to educate the hunter—rich and poor, both need it. Until he takes a hand, breeds stock and puts out food, discards his present motto, "a million for killing, but not one cent for increase"—until then, all the laws that congress can pass in a long session will have little effect.

Says Tournament Golf Becoming Too Popular

Some golfers point out that there is such a thing as tournament golf becoming too popular, writes H. G. Salsinger in the Detroit News.

They point to the crowds of 12,000 that packed around Bobby Jones on his last round in the United States open at Scioto, and the 15,000 that jammed the fairways when Jones and George Von Elm fought it out for the United States amateur title at Baltusrol.

The severe mental strain caused by the unwieldy mob takes too much from actors in this golf drama.

Jones has the heavier load to carry. He is always taxed more than his opponent, for Jones is the magnet. He knows it and feels constantly that it is up to him to deliver. It is next to impossible for him to keep from overpressing.

That Jones won at Scioto in the face of conditions was remarkable; that he lost at Baltusrol was not surprising.

You will probably say that it must have been as tough for Von Elm as it was for Jones, but that was not the case. Jones had the mob at his heels for five days before he met Von Elm. He was already worn out by the time he teed off against Von Elm. The challenger was fresh. No crowd had pressed him through five days of competition.

Adams was unconditionally released by the Pirates last season, together with Max Carey and Carson Bigbee, when it was charged the trio led a movement to oust Fred Clarke.

Getting Education by Selling Snake Venom

Six-foot diamond-back rattlesnakes are a cause of fear and dread to most people, but not to Leonard Keeler, Stanford university junior. For him they provide a substantial meal ticket, as he is earning his way through medical school raising them and selling their venom to a large commercial laboratory.

What began as a hobby and then developed into a source of revenue for financing his education is, however, only incidental to his main purpose. Keeler is trying to develop a serum to be used as an antitoxin for rattlesnake bites.

Scientists in India had developed a satisfactory serum for use in cobra bite cases, and in South America serums were in use that had reduced the death rate 60 per cent from poison snake bites. No serum, however, had been discovered for use against the rattler. To perfect this serum Keeler began to build up an immunity in the blood of horses. Injections would be given an animal, starting with .005 gram and gradually working over an eight months' period up to .5. When the immunity was reached six quarts were removed and the serum filtered from the blood plasma. From this a preparation is being made for the market.

Keeler sometimes has one of his pets rattle so his audience may recognize the danger signal if they should unfortunately encounter a rattlesnake in the open.

The puzzled young woman behind the counter smiled. "I'm sure I don't know," she said. "I should think you'd know, if you married him."

"Well," said the blushing bride at length, "I go home and ask him how to spell that name, then I come back."

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

WNU Service. Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons.

STORY FROM THE START

At Sleepy Cat Doctor Carpy tells Wentworth, freighting boss, of a shooting scrape in Bartoe's gambling den, in which John Selwood, gambler, in defense of his wounded partner, Dave Tracy, shows remarkable skill and nerve. A year afterward, Selwood, now Wentworth's representative at Sleepy Cat, comes upon a settler whose wagon has mired in a creek. He helps get the outfit clear, after picking up a girl's shoe and seeing and being attracted by the supposed owner thereof in Fyler's (the settler's) wagon. Moses McCracken, a youth, is robbed of $600 in a Sleepy Cat gambling den. Selwood forces the swindlers, Bartoe and Atkins, to return the money.

"What's that?" demanded Selwood, with a shade more of life and carefulness in his tone—"if Tracy said that—"

"Not doubting your word at all, Selwood—not at all. But somebody in a town like this always has to act as peacemaker—you know that. The boys seemed to pick on me for the job. It ain't much of a job, nor one I was looking for. But I was foot-loose and took it to oblige. I found I was getting all the kicks and the boys getting all the money, so I asked them to chip in down along the line. Most of 'em did. Tracy and a few others didn't—"

"Wasn't Tracy the only one that didn't?" asked Selwood impassively.

"That may be—I don't remember. But I never had any hard feeling against Tracy on that account. I want you to know that, Selwood. You seem," continued Starbuck with some irritation, "to want to stick to that subject. I didn't come here tonight to rake over old scores; I came here to try to patch up new ones, Selwood."

"Before we get out the sticking plaster," Selwood went on evenly, "let's get Dave's position clear—and mine. Dave felt that a place run like this place, where a straight game is dealt, didn't need any protection—neither the place nor the proprietors. It may be he made a mistake, but that's the way Dave felt—that's the way I feel. Now about this Bartoe business. He robbed today, among others, a boy here with his widowed mother, of six hundred dollars. I told Bartoe to give the boy back his money. He refused. I told him I'd clean him out in the morning or he could clean me out. There's no use of more words about it—that's all there is to it."

"Well, I wouldn't say that's all, Selwood," observed Starbuck, asserting himself. "I'm here to keep law and order and I can't have any places burned in the business quarter of Sleepy Cat. He's in the gambling business same as you are—"

Selwood jumped as if stung, and used a strong word. "Same as I am?" he echoed angrily. "Do I send out jailbirds like Atkins to drag men in here to rob them? What do you mean?"

It needed all of Starbuck's diplomacy to quiet things down. He rehearsed Bartoe's defense. He urged good feeling—all to no purpose. He found he could make no impression whatever on Selwood's firmness. He rose at length, indignant. "I see I can't reason with you. If anything unpleasant happens—don't hold me responsible!"

"Not if you keep out of it," observed Selwood, unperturbed.

"I'm here to keep the peace, not to 'keep out,'" retorted Starbuck, rising to his full height before his troublesome customer. Selwood rose in turn. "I believe you left Thief River just before I went there," he said calmly. "You had some trouble regarding claim signs."

Starbuck blazed. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Miners will travel all night to round up a claim jumper. But I feel exactly as you do, Starbuck. Why rake up old scores?"

"As far as I'm concerned," exclaimed Starbuck, advancing hotly, as Selwood purposely retreated, "if you mean the bunch that tried to jump my claims down there—bring on your miners!"

"I'm not much on old scores, Starbuck," said Selwood soberly. "I don't think we're going to have any trouble here—not you and I, anyway. Our teamsters can take care of Bunty's outfit tomorrow. I'm riding down to Thief River myself tonight on business and I've told McAlpin to keep a horse saddled for me. But I shan't start till eleven o'clock. I expect before that Bartoe will have that six hundred here. Drop in any time, Starbuck. Always glad to see you."

With this judicious and even-handed mixture of threats, hints, "anyways," and small talk, Selwood let Starbuck go, with feathers once more unruffled. But neither had fooled the other in the slightest degree. Both understood it was only a possible preliminary to situations that might carry far into the future.

At one minute past eleven o'clock Selwood left the gambling hall for the barn. His pony was waiting. Climbing into the saddle he headed south for the Thief River road, trying out the new pony's steps. He had crossed the river bridge and was swinging out on the Spanish sinks when he heard the clatter of hoofs behind him. A horseman riding fast overhauled him and he looked around to greet Bob Scott. Scott reined in beside the gambler, with his pony on its haunches. "The money's up," he grinned. "You won't need to bother the miners."

They rode back at a leisurely pace, put up their horses, and walked together up the hill. Selwood got the money, counted it, handed it to Scott, told him where to find the owner and deliver it. "Tell her to get her boy out of town before somebody else gets it away from him," was his only injunction.

* * * * * * *

"If there's any human scum in the whole blamed United States that ain't landed in Sleepy Cat," grumbled Carpy, "it must be because they ain't heard of it yet."

Doctor Carpy was an educated man, who knew quite well how, to speak good English. But, like many another frontiersman of his kind, he had caught the slovenly English of the men with whom he was thrown in contact.

"Now look at that coat," he continued, calmly aggrieved. "I bought it new at an auction yesterday! Last night I rode down to see a sick teamster at the bunkhouse—one o' your men, Selwood. While I was fixing him up it began to rain. When I started for home I put on the coat. By that time it was raining all-fired hard. I lifted my whip to touch up the horses, and the whole sleeve parted at the shoulder joint! When I reached around to see what the matter was, the other sleeve fell clean off. When I stepped out of the buggy, the coat come in two right across the back! Look at it!"

With some violent punctuation of his complaint, the doctor, who in Sleepy Cat never by any chance received more than the first syllable of his professional title and rarely his surname, was telling John Selwood of how he had been cheated.

"Where did you buy the coat?" asked Selwood, though less moved as a listener than the doctor was as an orator.

"Down at that new place—opposite the warehouse—in the old blockhouse. A man named Fyler is running a dry-goods store there. And Big Haynes is running a mock auction, on one side of the store. Come on down. You lick Haynes and I'll lick Fyler!"

The two men were talking in the one-story building adjoining and communicating with the hotel, that bore the small wood sign—known as the "shingle"—of the sole doctor in Sleepy Cat or within a hundred miles of Sleepy Cat—an open-handed, profane, and not always cool-headed surgeon, but one whose failings were in rough measure redeemed by a generous heart and the benefits of a skill free, without question, to all comers.

Selwood, travel-stained and dressed in the rough gear of the trail, had evidently just come in from a trip over the division and sat listening to his friend with the air of a man who has more serious matters on his mind.

"How is Dave coming on?" he asked, without responding to Carpy's flippant invitation to help "clean up" the new trader.

The doctor, one elbow on the table, scratched his head. "Hang Dave," he said, perplexed, "he ain't coming on. I can't get any life into him. It's close to a year now since he got hurt. But you've got to remember, John, he's an old man, and put in three years in the Army of the Potomac. Now, look at you. The first time Dave came to see me, a year ago, to get some medicine for you he said you were in the last stages of consumption. It wasn't so; but you were headed that way all right. Look at you now—spry as an antelope."

"You took good care of me."

Carpy disclaimed. "Good care nothing. It was this dry mountain air—not too high and thin, neither—that took care of you; and you're young. Now, Dave is just teeterin' along—wound all healed up, but just kind of slow paralysis. Nothing I can put in him seems to pull him up. It sure was hard to get what he got here in Sleepy Cat, after three years in the army. This town is certainly tough—and getting tougher."

"It was tough before you and I saw it, Doctor; and it will be tough after we're laid up on the hill," replied Selwood indifferently. "If you can pull Dave through you'll save one good man for it—if he is a gambler."

"Where you going?"

"Down to the tent." Carpy understood what he meant—that he was going to see his wounded partner. Tracy had been moved from the gambling-hall to quieter quarters on the edge of the tent colony of the town.

As the two men parted and Selwood walked down the hotel steps, a tall, odd-looking man accosted him. "Stranger," he said with a suspicious air, "I'm lookin' for John Seltzer."

Selwood answered promptly if not definitely. "What do you want with John Seltzer?"

"I'm a Russell and Wentworth mule boss, stranger, from Medicine Bend. This man Seltzer is our superintendent here."

"You're William Pardaloe—"

"Just plain Bill, stranger—Bill Pardaloe—what do they call you?"

"It depends somewhat, Bill, on who does the calling; my friends call me John Selwood."

"Then that's what I want to call you, stranger—I don't give a hang who you are or what your name is—we're friends."

Selwood looked Bill over with some curiosity.

He was an unusual man even among unusual men. In his left hand, with the stock resting on the ground, he held, as he talked, a double-barreled shotgun, of a size and calibre unique in the mountain country. It was, in fact, an old eight-gauge English gun with barrels thirty-six inches long. Its normal charge, as Selwood afterward learned, was ten drams of powder and "a handful of buckshot" in each barrel. This extraordinary weapon was carried ostensibly as a protection against "hostyle" Indians—though Indians had for years ceased to molest freight wagons on that trail.

In size, Pardaloe matched up with his gun. He stood well above six feet in his moccasins—which he wore when he became confused as to where he had left his boots—and he carried his arms and legs pretty much akimbo. He was long-limbed and gaunt of figure, with a browned skin drawn like parchment over a face as lean as a hound's. A sharp nose shot out like an interrogation point upside down, between beetling cheekbones, and his upper lip and lower face were covered with a scraggly growth of beard—a growth that in a beauty contest would have damned Adonis himself.

"Ben Wentworth spoke to me about you, Bill," returned Selwood; "said he was going to send you up here—"

"That wasn't what I looked you up for now—John McAlpin told me I'd find you at the hotel. I want to say, stranger—"

"Selwood," suggested the superintendent encouragingly.

"I'm a brother of Mrs. McCracken—Mose is my nephew. She wrote me how you got her money back from them river rats—"

"That was nothing."

"Well, I want to say—I'm with you, stranger! And I'll get your name set after a while."

"Wentworth told me he was transferring you to this division. What were they paying you on the plains job?"

"Thirty-five."

"Forty up here, Bill."

Pardaloe gradually caught the import of the words. "Much obliged,

"What Do You Want With John Seltzer?"

John," he said gravely. "Everything costs a quarter here."

"I see," said Selwood significantly, "you've found that out. Wait for me at the barn—I'll be there in a few minutes."

To this tent quarter had also come Christie Fyler and her father for temporary lodgings. Selwood paid little attention to the flotsam of the tent colony. He had only been careful to pitch and equip a tent for his friend, a hundred yards from any other tent. But Dave had lingered—refusing to die and not quite equal to getting well; in consequence, the newcomers encroached on his privacy until the Fyler tent was pitched almost back to back with his own; and all that Christie had ever heard of her neighbor's tent—a larger and better tent than the others—was that it sheltered a sick gambler. Christie saw at times an Indian-looking man coming and going from the gambler's tent, and at times a woman—who came daily from somewhere—to bring broth and to tidy up the quarters of the wounded man.

Once Christie, at her own work, had caught a glimpse of this woman's face. She was not old in years, but her complexion, ruined by the sun and the winds of the mountains, made her look old. Her features showed traces of an earlier beauty, and her elastic step proved her health and strength; it was care and unhappiness that aged her expression. Her eyes fixed themselves in Christie's memory; they were dark, rather deep eyes, with a hard look, as if of hope, like her youth, faded. Meeting her again in the street, as the two passed on their ways, Christie had paused to ask a question. The response had been cold—not calculated to invite acquaintance.

Margaret Hyde, indeed, courted no acquaintance. Many women passed through Sleepy Cat, but among the few that called Sleepy Cat their abiding place she walked alone. She was housekeeper at Doctor Carpy's hotel; a hard-working housekeeper under the hardest possible conditions; but she stuck to her job and walked her way—alone. And cold and hard though she was, she was never too tired to bring delicacies to the ailing or to sit up at night to care for a sick teamster.

On this morning that Selwood parted from the irascible surgeon, Christie Fyler, leaving her own tent to go up street, caught sight for the first time of a new visitor at the sick man's tent. This was Selwood. No day passed, indeed, without Selwood's seeing Tracy; he made his visits usually in the early evening, before going to the hall. On this particular morning his anxiety had got him up early—for him—that is, before noon, to see Carpy and discuss his friend's chances. From the tent Selwood walked back to the hotel for his own breakfast and dinner—usually one meal. On the way he had to pass the old building made over into a store by the trader, Fyler—the man of whom Carpy had so feelingly complained—and passing, Selwood, moved by an impulse of curiosity, looked in.

A midday auction was in progress. Before a counter, where Selwood entered, was gathered a small crowd of men—emigrants, settlers, teamsters, and loafers; while on the counter, red-faced and in his shirt-sleeves, stood Big Haynes, running an eloquent auction. The bidding was good, stuff was moving briskly. At the rear end of the counter Fyler, behind a dry-goods box, was wrapping up purchases and taking in the money. It looked like a queer combination to Selwood, the new trader and the two Sleepy Cat worthies, but he had no comments to record on that point, either to himself or to any one else.

Selwood, listening to Big Haynes' thundering praises of his wares and complaints of the astonishing coldness of his buyers, used his eyes about him. He saw that the stock was of a sort not infrequently shipped to the frontier because out-of-date elsewhere. It was desperately ill-assorted for the needs of western men, though it might have suited western women, had there been any number in Sleepy Cat to suit. Selwood edged gradually over to where Fyler was at work wrapping goods near the money till. He remembered then that he had some business with Fyler.

"You seem to have the best part of the job," he said presently, and solely because he wished to talk to him.

Fyler looked up without recognizing his benefactor of Crawling Stone wash.

"How's that?"

"Next the money drawer."

Fyler laughed. "Mighty little in it!"

"My name's Selwood," said the gambler, without raising his voice. "I look after the Russell and Wentworth freight here. My wagon boss tells me we're short some goods for you in the last shipment."

The trader looked at him with a new interest. "You were; twelve cases of boots—all I had coming; just about put me out of business. Where were they lost?"

"They weren't lost. They were stolen. I came in to get a description—when you're through with the sale."

As he spoke, a man that would invite attention entered the front door. He was short, almost squat in stature, and square-built—practically everything about the man could have been measured by a right angle. He was smooth-faced, his head was square, his forehead square, his shoulders square, his feet broad and square, and his jaw was square. He walked slowly and planted his hob-nailed boots squarely before him. His legs were short, his arms long, and he would have disputed build with a gorilla and strength with a grisly. This was Abe Cole, the Sleepy Cat blacksmith. Other blacksmiths there were in Sleepy Cat; but Cole was known as and designated as the Sleepy Cat blacksmith.

Fortunately he was as peaceable as powerful when not aroused, but his disposition was naturally positive, and he was known as a fighter.

Abe shouldered himself through the crowd without hesitation or difficulty—whenever his shoulders encountered an obstacle, the obstacle gave way. He walked straight to Fyler, holding out a handful of soggy scraps of black felt. A bedraggled hatband hung from his wrist. "Look here, Haynes!" he thundered. The auction stopped. "Here's the hat you sold me yesterday!" Cole added, in no uncertain tones. Haynes gave him prompt attention. "That's what the rain did to it!" bellowed Abe.

Haynes, leaning down, picked up the shoddy wreck, the hatband last and very carefully, for fear it should fall to pieces, and examined the remains with solicitude.

Land of Lottery

Lottery tickets are sold in Madrid just the same as newspapers are sold on the streets in the United States. One is never out of range of the lottery ticket seller. Everybody indulges in this dissipation, and there is ample opportunity for there is a state lottery distribution every two weeks. There are official agencies, but these seem to be patronized only by those who buy the tickets to sell again. Ordinarily purchases are made of the persons along the street who call their wares just as the huckster and newsboys do, and as the day for the drawing approaches they grow more and more excited, each one claiming that he is about to sell the lucky ticket. Hunchbacks are the best salesmen, for there is a superstition that these persons bring or give luck.—Chicago Journal.

Mrs. Furtado Makes Rapid Recovery

Sacramento Woman Suffering From After-Effects of "Flu," Nervous Exhaustion and Run-Down Condition, Recovers Perfect Health. Thanks Tanlac

The experience of Mrs. Mary Furtado, living at 2915 24th St., Sacramento, Cal., should be of interest to everyone suffering similar ailments.

When Mrs. Furtado was only 22, "flu" left her in a badly run-down condition.

"I was in such a weak condition," says Mrs. Furtado, "that I couldn't do a thing. I was awfully thin, had no appetite whatever, and was so weak that I couldn't do my housework. My nerves were in a terrible state, everything worried me and I felt some days as if I would go to pieces.

"Tanlac certainly proved to be just what I needed. I not only gained 15 pounds in weight, but that tired, run-down feeling left me completely, my appetite improved wonderfully and the nervousness all disappeared.

"I never felt better in my life than I did after taking Tanlac. I could do my housework and I felt just perfect.

"Whenever I feel the least bit run-down or tired I always go back to Tanlac, for it never fails to build me right up."

Benefit by Mrs. Furtado's experience. Let this marvelous tonic made from roots, barks and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula, rebuild your run-down body, drive out pain and poison, give you robust health.
